WHO WE ARE

Sinai University was established referring to the presidential decree number 363 for year 2006 in accordance to provisions of law number 101 year 1992 regarding the private Universities which was replaced by law number 12 year 2009 regarding the private and civil Universities and its executive regulations issued by the presidential decree number 302 for year 2010.

The significance of establishing a university, including research centers, especially in the North of Sinai, is not only due to the lack of such universities in this area but also to the special importance of having a world-class education to support the economic development of the region and to tie the Egyptian economy to the changes and transformation of the international economic system in the 21st century. Specialized high institutes are also needed, hence many countries tended to set up more universities, academies, institutes, and cities. The idea is to increase the flexibility in different economic sectors by securing a base of specialists who constitute the real starting point for economic growth. This fact does not negate the risk of establishing this university in Sinai, which represents a real challenge for national participation in the development of this region.

Sinai University, established in 2006, has been a source of education and innovation in Sinai. With two thriving campuses in Arish and Kantara, the university has been nurturing intellectual growth and fostering a sense of community among its students.

Offering a diverse range of educational opportunities, Sinai University has seven distinguished faculties, including
